THE 5 BEST NEW TEQUILAS OF 2016

Link to Full Article

If you're trying to coerce someone into liking tequila they've only had shots of bottom shelf imposters, this new bottling from Pasote – a brand that launched earlier this year – is a good place to start. It's smooth and savory, with definite salt notes on the palate, but it's not overpowering, nor does it last long on the palate. While we suspect it might get a bit lost in a citrus-heavy cocktail, its salty notes would play well in a Bloody Maria.
